Brett Don is Chief Information Officer for Stradley Ronon. He is responsible for the cost-effective delivery of technology services to the firm's 200 attorneys across eight offices. Brett leverages two decades of experience to deliver technology-driven solutions that create efficiencies, reduce risk and drive innovation for bottom-line growth.

Prior to joining Stradley, Brett served as chief information and risk officer at a 900-person Washington, D.C.-based law firm where he set the strategic direction for IT, e-discovery, records, new business intake, docketing and knowledge management services. More recently, Brett founded SDK Risk + IT Advisors, LLC and advised executives at commercial and nonprofit businesses on complex business problems related to technology and information security.
